Art Unit: 2834

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1 and 3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over lino.

lino, figs. 11 and 12 teaches a piezoelectric actuator comprising a base frame 33, a motion stimulator including a support member #26 and a vibrating plate which includes a piezoelectric element #14, a rotor #116 and an elastic element #32 for biasing the rotor toward the stator. lino doesn't explicitly show a "reinforcing section" associated with the piezoelectric plates. However, providing reinforcement for piezoelectric elements per se has long been practiced (Official notice taken) to protect the element from breakage due to external sources, to pre-load the piezo element to prevent it from going into tension (where it is mechanically weak), and/or to protect the piezo element from wear or abrasion. Thus, for any of these known reasons it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to provide a reinforcing section to the piezoelectric plates of lino. Regarding claim 3, the wherein clause has not been given patentable weight as it is merely a statement of desired function without any commensurate structure to enable performance of the function.

Claim 2 objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Art Unit: 2834

Claim 4 is allowed.

Further cited of interest are lino (769) (fig 8c), Zumeris (fig. 7), Kasuga, Diefenbach and Luthier.
